IS SCRIPTURE ENOUGH?

Saturday 4 July 2009 from 9.00am till 5.00pm

The place of Scripture in the life and thinking of the Church is the most hotly contested battleground for today's Christians.

This one day seminar, led by four leading theologians from the Trinity College Theological School in Melbourne, explores the claim of Scripture alone ("sola scriptura"). In ethics, in systematic theology, even in Biblical Studies, is Scripture able to stand alone without reason, tradition and the other sources of authority at the heart of classical Anglicanism? Come and find out .

The seminar will be led by the Rev'd Dr Tim Gaden, the Rev'd Dorothy Lee, the Rev'd Dr Andrew McGowan and the Rev'd Richard Treloar.

The Rev'd Dr Tim Gaden has degrees in Arts and Divinity and a doctorate from Monash University. He is the Dean of the Trinity Theological School, College Chaplain and the Stewart Lecturer in Theology. Tim Gaden teaches Greek, ethics and Anglican spiritual traditions. After completing his doctorate on the use of Hellenistic philosophy and ethics in the Apostolic Fathers and a post-doctoral position at King's College London, he held parish appointments in London and Melbourne.

The Rev'd Dr Dorothy Lee has degrees in Arts, Education and Divinity and a doctorate from the University of Sydney. She is the Frank Woods Distinguished Lecturer in Biblical Studies at Trinity Theological School. Dorothy Lee lectures in New Testament with a particular focus on the Gospels. She was born in Scotland and spent her childhood between the UK and Australia. For more than 20 years she was an ordained Minister of the Uniting Church, lecturing in New Testament. She became an Anglican in 2007 and is now an ordained priest. Her main research interest is the theology of the Fourth Gospel.

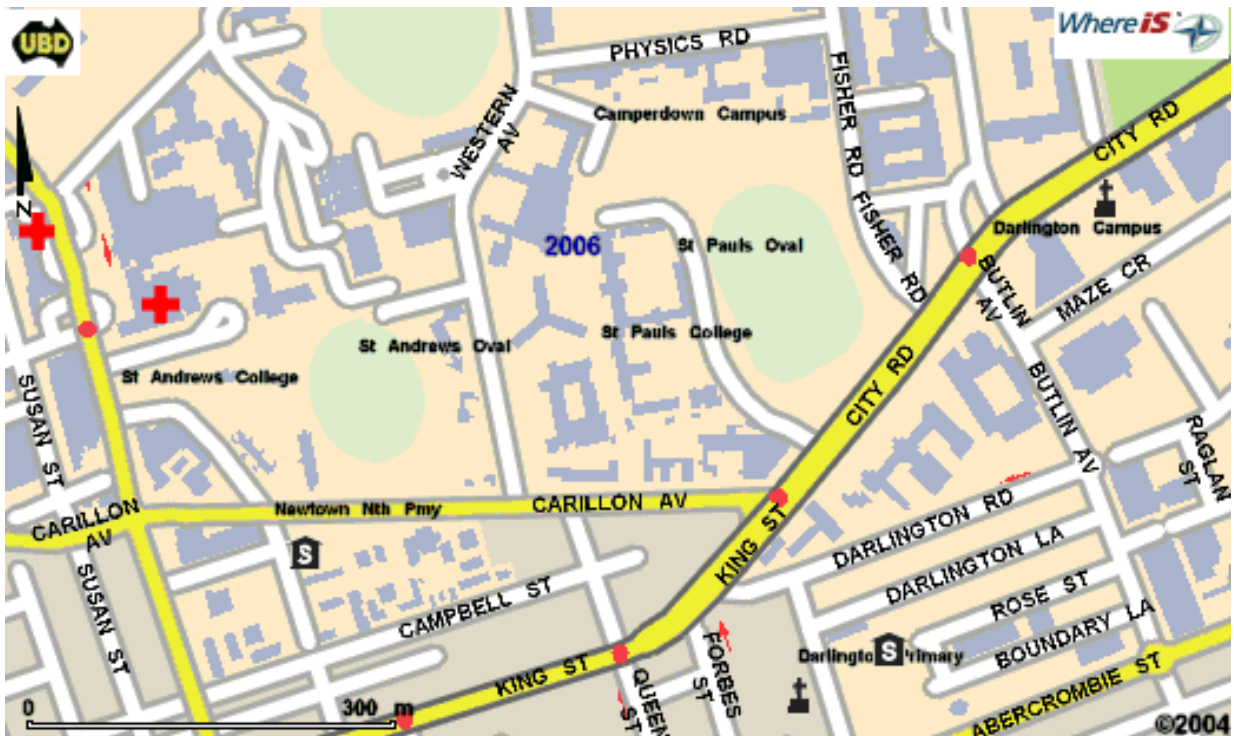

Associate Professor Andrew McGowan has degrees in Arts and Divinity and a doctorate from Notre Dame University in America. He is the Warden of Trinity College and a lecturer in theology. Andrew McGowan, who is an ordained priest, became Warden of Trinity College in January 2007, and he previously was the Director of the Theological School where he continues his involvement in his role as Joan F.W. Munro Lecturer.

The Rev'd Dr Richard Treloar is the Vicar of Christ Church South Yarra in Melbourne. After ordination he served in rural Victoria during which time he completed a Masters degree (by research) in theology. Returning to Melbourne, he completed his doctoral studies and had a range of responsibilities at Trinity College including chaplain and a lecturer in theology. He returned to parish ministry at Christ Church in 2007.
